

Custody Battles - Washington State Child Custody Help

Custody Battles are Rarely About the Children

If you end up or are already involved in a high conflict child custody dispute in Washington state, you will more then likely (and rightfully so) feel completely overwhelmed by the Washington Family Court system. Many are forced to either give up their parental rights or spend tens of thousands of dollars in divorce attorneys' fees trying to enforce or regain custody of their children.

The saddest thing about all this -- the children are always stuck in the middle because the adults can't work our their differences. The Washington state custody laws can be challenging, making divorce mediation increasingly helpful and affordable. If you're involved in such a custody battle in Washington, PAPA can help.

We are very familiar with the Washington State family courts and the processes through which custody battles are handled, particularly where parental rights are concerned, Dragging a family through such a court system can prove to be devastating to all involved, saddly mostly the children.

PAPA (Parents Against Parental Alienation) works to help petition for custody and file the correct motions that are required in Washington State Family Court. Preventing you from becoming victims of the Washington court system and being further alienated from your children.
